

BOB LAM 林盛斌

Lam Shing Bun, also known as Bob Lam, is a highly acclaimed and multi-talented individual in the entertainment industry of Hong Kong. With a career spanning various roles including host, actor, and DJ, Bob has established himself as a prominent figure since his debut in 2003 as a DJ for Hong Kong's New Town Info Radio. Through his witty and humorous hosting style, Bob gradually gained recognition and popularity among audiences. He became widely known for his involvement in programs such as "New Banana Club" and "Happy Family World," which further solidified his presence in the industry.

In 2012, Bob Lam joined TVB (Television Broadcasts Limited), one of Hong Kong's leading television networks, which opened up new opportunities for him to connect with a larger viewership. He went on to host several programs, showcasing his versatility and captivating the attention of both fans and industry professionals. Bob didn't shy away from taking on new challenges and expanded his repertoire by venturing into television dramas and appearing in multiple films. His fearlessness in embodying diverse characters and his ability to effortlessly deliver comedic and spooky performances garnered him widespread acclaim and further elevated his popularity.

Bob's distinctively magnetic voice, characterized by its richness and charm, captured the attention of film producers who recognized his talent for voice-over work. As a result, he was invited to lend his voice to various films, seizing every opportunity to showcase his skills.

Beyond his achievements in the entertainment industry, Bob Lam is highly regarded as a prominent emcee. Alongside his television endeavors, he is actively engaged in hosting a wide range of events including brand activities, press conferences, banquets, and prestigious award ceremonies. His amiable and approachable demeanor, coupled with his exceptional hosting abilities, have made him a sought-after emcee for various occasions. Additionally, Bob's familiar face can often be seen in advertisements, where he lends his charismatic presence to enhance brand recognition and appeal.
